Scholarly Article

What to look for before you print.

Document type: This might help you figure out whether or not the author is trying to persuade you of his/her point of view.

Source: Click on the hyperlink and look for publication type. If it indicates Academic Journal it is a scholarly source. Make sure to read the description because it provides the scope of the publication.

Abstract: Read it carefully because it will provide hints as to whether or not the author intends to inform, explain, or persuade. The authors describe their research and results.
